Welcome Note

Greetings–

The Diplomacy and Diversity Fellowship takes place during a time of extraordinary challenge in international and domestic realms. Our aim is to provide historical and contemporary insights from some of the most important observers and practitioners from both sides of the Atlantic and beyond – leaders in government, foreign policy institutions, business, media and the academy.

The wide range of subjects that we will explore includes aspects of international law, transatlantic relations, security and conflict, national sovereignty, the European Union, international development, trade and business, democratic movements, technology and social media, trafficking and slavery, authoritarian states and human rights, including those of minorities. We will also examine the role of non-governmental organizations, pressure groups and a variety of domestic constituencies in the formulation of foreign policy.

Questions about diversity and pluralism will intersect in these discussions with unusual frequency throughout the program. We will explore diversity in a broad sense – diversity of peoples, ideas, values, institutions and practices. We will discuss the formation and practice of foreign policy by a diverse cadre of institutions, groups and individuals and the impact of national and foreign policy on pluralistic societies.

Embarking on this program, Humanity in Action has specific goals: to make our societies more effective and constructive in addressing global issues; to increase the representation of minorities in international fields; to recognize the power and dignity in diversity based upon different cultural and historical perspectives; to appreciate the importance of pluralism as it intersects and sometimes even drives international issues; and to expand perspectives in graduate programs and research communities to include issues of diversity and pluralism in the consideration of international affairs.

We are very grateful to our many speakers in Washington, Berlin, Paris and The Hague and to those institutions and individuals hosting us.

With thanks,

About the Fellowship

In 2014, Humanity in Action launched the Diplomacy and Diversity Fellowship, a new transatlantic educational program for graduate students about international relations and global diversity. In this program, a group of 24 American and European Fellows engage in an intense and demanding series of high-level seminars, discussions and site visits to explore a wide range of international issues with particular emphasis on democracy, diversity and pluralism.

The 2015 fellowship will take place in Washington, Paris and Berlin. It will conclude in The Hague at the Sixth Annual Humanity in Action International Conference. In the United States, Germany, France and the Netherlands, the Fellows will meet with experts and practitioners at governmental agencies, international NGOs, universities, think tanks, media outlets and foreign policy organizations. The Council on Foreign Relations will host and organize multiple sessions in Washington focused on building skills, networks and knowledge for foreign policy careers. The program will take place from May 29 – June 28, 2015.

VISION

Foreign policy is no longer the sole domain of national governments and heads of state. CEOs, local governments, journalists, think tanks, NGOs, lobbyists and online activists increasingly play influential roles in international negotiations and initiatives. Foreign policy is also becoming more influenced by national pluralism and the interests of diverse sets of domestic groups. Thus, the Diplomacy and Diversity Fellowship will explore diversity in the broadest sense—diversity of peoples, ideas, values, institutions and practices in international relations.

Humanity in Action believes that this diversification of players in international affairs and the interests they pursue create the need for leaders from diverse backgrounds who are able to approach global challenges in innovative ways. Humanity in Action seeks to cultivate leadership skills and knowledge in the Diplomacy and Diversity Fellows—a new group of emerging leaders who have the knowledge, creativity and ability to collaborate across borders and sectors in changing international communities.

The guiding mission of the Diplomacy and Diversity Fellowship is to increase understanding of pluralistic societies, awareness of the importance of diversity in diplomatic and other international fields, and the inclusion of those from minority backgrounds in international relations.

APPROACH

In the 2015 Diplomacy and Diversity Fellowship, participants will discuss and research a wide range of subjects including, but not limited to, democracy in a domestic and international perspective; the influence of non-state actors—including business, non-profit organizations and interest groups—in foreign affairs; the role of Germany in European politics and international relations; conflict and national security; and migration and asylum.

The Fellows will explore these subjects from national, transatlantic and international vantage points while also evaluating the ways in which history impacts contemporary policy. The program's sessions will introduce Fellows to both foreign policy experts and practitioners who will provide conceptual and theoretical perspectives as well as networking opportunities.
